

The painting of the Wasatch Mountains represents Northern Utah. It is located in the Senate Chamber.

The red rock in Bryce Canyon symbolizes Southern Utah. This painting is found in the Senate Chamber.

This painting of Utah Lake is located in the Senate Chamber. It is original to the building and was painted by Lee Greene Richards. Though there is only one painting here, there are many panels of this painting.

The painting below symbolizes the one year anniversary of the Pioneers arriving in Utah. They are already settled in the valley here.

This lunette, located on the East side of the Rotunda, depicts the pioneers as they are entering the Salt Lake valley. It is original to the building.

This painting is of the Pioneers coming into the valley. The man in the white shirt is Brigham Young, the leader of the Pioneers and the first Governor of the Utah Territory. Look for this in the Capitol Rotunda.